APPRENTICE MENTORING

The Building Trade of Alberta represents 75,000 skilled building trades professionals, of which (%) are apprentices – the future of our industry.

BTA encourages experienced journeymen to mentor new apprentices to become safe, skilled, competent and effective professionals and leaders.

Mentoring brings value to everyone involved in its practice – apprentices, journeymen, supervisors, and the organizations for which they work. The process allows:

- ✓ Apprentices the opportunity to gain wisdom from someone who has traveled the path before them
- ✓ Journeymen the opportunity to invest themselves in someone who seeks what they can offer

- ✓ The organization the opportunity to share information and spread the acquired learning and knowledge of its workers

Construction and maintenance work often involves a variety of hazards that must be managed effectively to ensure the safety of all workers, which is everyone's responsibility. In fact, safety leadership is expected and required at all levels. One of the biggest benefits to establishing an Apprentice Mentorship Program is the enhanced focus on safety and the ongoing commitment by all participants to maintain a safe environment. An essential component of the mentor and mentee relationship is to provide support for the elements of a safety-focused workplace, establishing a solid safety foundation for apprentices and the industry's culture.

We need your help...

The Building Trades of Alberta have launched the BUILDING TRADES APPRENTICE MENTORING PROJECT to investigate and develop a mentoring program specific to Building Trades apprentices. A critical part of this process is getting input from our members. We need to understand what our apprentices want and require, and we need to draw on the invaluable experience and expertise of our journeymen and supervisors. Your input will play a significant role in the development of a successful program.

We encourage you to take the first step by answering a quick survey available on the BTA website. Responses are confidential and will be kept with the BTA and your union.
